

Hey everyone!

Just a quick heads-up that this, and other websites that I manage will be down intermittently over the next few weeks.

I'm in the process of moving everything over to a cloud based solution, after being with my hosting provider's web server service since at least 2013. I'm also moving up in the world to Debian / Plesk, which is what I used when managing the RaceSpot TV server for god knows how long, so it's back to something which will come back to me like riding a bike.

This will also mean that I can start re-importing podcasts which have been offline for a few months, as well as some community resources that I've started working on to support NEETs in the UK. There's also more things coming in the podcast / Vodcast / other related content world over the coming months, so please check back for further updates.

Thank you everyone for sticking with me, it's been a chaotic year, and this is just one part of general housekeeping and spring cleaning that I've been meaning to do for too long now, and it's just another cog in the wheel. Worst case scenario, I'll just give up and move to Substack; there's no way I'm entertaining WordPress.com or other direct hosting solutions!

---

Peace, Rage And Love xx